Dear Sir,

As you are perhaps aware. Angola has made definite strides in its political stability as well as in socio economic progress. The government of Angola is now geared for international business interactions. This involves both trade as well as investment

Areas of export from India into Angola having good potential for growth / consolidation are : footwear, processed foods, textiles, hardboards and similar products matches, soaps, paints, plastic household items, hand tools agricultural implements, pesticides, cement, etc.

Areas in which investment in Angola will reap profits are: forestry related industries, fisheries related industries, mining of minerals, mining of gems and diamonds cutting & polishing of diamonds, poultry projects, mini sugar and cement plants telecommunications, construction and infrastructure, development of railway, power generation and transmission, health, education etc.

With this large potential for trade and investment opportunities the Indo-Angola Chamber of Commerce and industry, which is a registered body section 25 of the Companies Act, 1956, is ideally poised to be your guide and partner to help you to fructify your plans for trade or investment in Angola.
